Oct 13, 2010 A hotfix is a software update for a specific type of device, usually one that has been patched for the most recent problem. The problem is not tracked or handled like the customer support forums and the release version is not specified for the hotfix. It is released for those who are extremely knowledgeable of the device or manufacturers. They are usually released after a certain period of time and in some cases require the device be returned to a company or official for testing. Nmap is not such a device. Your issue is a request to the community to work on the open source project. There is no concept of a hotfix. We are trying to gain reputation by solving this problem as quickly as possible.
